

Anti-Corruption Painting and Sketching Competition Organized by the Art & Culture Society at IMSciences

The Art & Culture Society at the Institute of Management Sciences (IMSciences) recently organized an inspiring painting and sketching competition themed "Anti-Corruption." This event provided a platform for students to channel their creativity into raising awareness about the pervasive issue of corruption. The competition saw remarkable participation, with students from various departments contributing unique perspectives through their art.

The competition highlighted students' creativity and artistic capability, showcasing powerful visual representations that portrayed the harmful effects of corruption on society. The participants used their artwork to convey messages about integrity, accountability, and the need for a corruption-free society. Each piece on display reflected an original take on the theme, demonstrating students' ability to engage with social issues through artistic expression.

Ms. Amna Kakakhel, a BS English student in her 5th semester, was awarded first place for her outstanding artwork. Her piece stood out for its compelling depiction of corruption's impact on justice and social equity. The second position was awarded to Zarghuna Farman, 1st semester, BS Data Science and Zara Latif, 1st semester, BS Accounting & Finance and third position to Esha Khattak of BS 1st semester, whose works similarly resonated with the audience and judges, reflecting depth and creativity in addressing the competition's theme.

The Art & Culture Society's initiative in organizing this competition proved to be an effective means of fostering awareness and encouraging artistic talent at IMSciences. Events like these not only contribute to students' personal growth but also promote a culture of social responsibility within the academic community.
