A group of MS Governance and Public Policy students visited Katas Raj Temple and the Khewra Salt Mines. The exposure visit was planned to delve into the intersection of cultural heritage, natural resources, and governance.

Katas Raj Temple, a sacred Hindu complex, is a symbol of diversity this land holds. Khewra Salt Mines is the world's second largest salt mines, having colossal salt crystals formed over millions of years.

The exposure visit triggered a debate around how unnecessary pressure on natural resources can threaten an archaeological marvel and how important sustainable practices in tourism and industrial growth are.
